“ Barb and I were childhood friends and schoolmates. We played with each other almost every day, the best of friends. I lived in the little yellow house on 17th Avenue a few houses away. Our family moved out to Washington when I was in 5th grade. Moved back to Port Huron at the end of 7th grade. We sort of went our own ways with our own groups of friends, but I always had feelings for her even when I was a stupid teenager.

At any rate, I was up all-night last night thinking of what may have been if I had maintained my relationship with Barb. My mind was racing for some reason. Perhaps some sort of alternate universe, psychic connection, paranormal thing I can't explain. All the should have, would have, could have in my life, those missed opportunities. She had the best smile and was full of energy. I loved being around her. What an idiot I was. Dumb kid.

So here I am, the next morning, "What the heck. Let's look Barb up." Then I see her obituary. I'm a grown man crying my eyes out here. I don't know what to say.

From looking at these photos of her, I am glad to see that she had a great family and there was a lot of love. So bittersweet.

“ Barb was was the best friend anyone could ask for. She loved her friends but her family was her first priority!! Loved camping with her and grandson Nathan. I am at lost for words right now trying to take it in. I will forever think and miss her beautiful personality.

“ Barb Logan was more than a friend she was my family we’ve known each other since fifth grade. I love her like a sister and always have. We used to do the craziest things. We were a pair of misfits in our days of youth. One of the best memories of Barb is here in Florida driving down 75 with the music blaring and listening to music and singing together. That memory will last with me forever. I have so many to share but it’s hard to do at this time. One day I hope to join her in heaven and be kids again.
