“ Don't remember how it came about. But one day Brenda and I were on our way to West Virginia to visit her family there. I remember how beautiful it was there and so laid back. But I did feel a little closed in. We were in a valley (hallor or something like that she called it). There were mountains on all four sides of us. Felt like i was being swallowed up and it made it hard to breathe for a minute. But Brenda had a way about her that made you able to relax -- sort of like distracting you away from what was bothering you. It was an amazing trip and I will always cherish the time we spent together back then. Miss you Brenda and hope you're at peace in God's loving arms.
