“Dave was a great friend. He loved music, his jeep, drinking, getting high, and women. He taught me to have a good time and to keep a positive attitude when I was adjusting to life after high school. He had many friends and was very intelligent. He loved working at Lazoens and going to concerts. I have many great memories. We hung out together then once in a while up until 1984 when I moved away. I remember him as always honest; he loved his life and cared enough to help me out when I was depressed. He always showed me respect; that was the kind of man he was; true to himself and his friends.”
