“ I worked with Jack at Marysville power plant for about four years, Jack was a retiree at that time when he came back to help us clean out the plant. I will miss his sense of humor. Jack loved to golf when he could, we always could count on Jack stopping by for a cup of coffee and good chat at the plant every morning, even when he was not on the payroll, he had to come in and say hi.
Jack told me his dad worked at Marysville power plant, he remembered when he was a kid when Edison played the newest Mickey Mouse movies for the kids at the clubhouse.
I will miss Jack and all his stories.
Thank you Jack for being my friend and co-worker.

“ My Uncle Jack always made me laugh. Always. His jokes were something I looked forward to hearing; although some were bad, and others perhaps questionable in their appropriateness, most were just really damned funny. I loved hearing Uncle Jack tell a joke. He taught me what humor is and how to be funny. I think I'll miss his sense of humor most of all.

And I always knew he really truly cared about me. Older male role models have been in short supply a lot of my life, but Uncle Jack taught me “guy stuff”. Any knowledge I have of tools, or the mechanics of how things work came from Jack. He felt at times like a second dad to me: teaching me about life, about cars, and circular saws, and about girls; until girls turned into boys for me, and even then he accepted me for me at a time when I really needed that kind of unconditional love and acceptance. My Uncle Jack is probably the most genuine and honest person I've ever known. I have always admired that about him.

I love you Uncle Jack.
