“ I just learned of Jeff’s passing. We knew each other back in high school. My thoughts and prayers go out to his family.

Michelle (Curtis) Miller - March 25, 2019 at 07:39 AM

“ My sister in PH just told me tonight about Jeff's passing. Jeff and I (along with/my two sons) lived together for (12) months. We were together when 9/11 happened in fact. My son (23 next month) was only four years old when Jeff took him goose hunting. Ben, my son, still remembers that day with Jeff & how goose tastes! His mom and dad treated us like family. My oldest son's very (first) kiss was shared with Jeff's oldest daughter (little did we learn this years later.) Jeff was a bouncer at The Office bar and painted during our year together. My sweetest memory was coming home only too see the words "I love you" made with his blue painters tape (across my garage door.) I loved him dearly. It wasn't until shortly after Jeff moved in with my boys and me did I learn Jeff & my older brother graduated together in 1980. The last contact I had from Jeff was a phone call from him. He called me right after I moved to Miami for a job to let me know he had suffered his first heart attack. It was a brief conversation as he caught me at work. Our last words to one another were of our always holding a special place in one another's hearts. My sincerest sympathies extend to his girls. Too soon, Jeff. But even if goodbyes are forever we can be reminded so is love. 💔

Jocelyn, I'm so sorry about the lost of your dad. I remember you & your sister well and of the Xmas we all shared at your grandparents. It was many years later when my oldest son, Tommy, and you shared a kiss! I scolded him as I believe he was only 11 and you just around that age. Ha Know your dad is smiling in Heaven with those beautiful eyes of his. Stay well, please.

“ Oh Daddy, my heart hurts every moment. I love you. I have so very many memories that I keep replaying in my mind. Of you, and us. Your smile, that smirk, the love from your eyes, tight hugs, your laughter and how you took joy in the small things. How much love you possessed, and how you were there when anyone needed it. I feel truly blessed to be able to say you are my Dad, and without you I wouldnt be the woman I am today. I will forever carry your strength and love with me.

Forever and always loving you,

Danielle, I just learned of the loss of your dad today. I live across country and have since your dad and I split up after a year together. You and your sister met both of my boys from Missouri who came to visit us. You were young but I do recall your girls well. I loved your dad. I will always think of his eyes, voice, and smile. I have mentioned him over the years as the only man with long hair I ever dated. Ha ha Please know he is your guardian angel. Stay well. Stay strong. :)

“ Jeff had the biggest heart of anyone I have ever known. If you needed help, Jeff was always there, willing to do whatever he could do. I met Jeff in 1998 and we became fast friends. A few years later, when he had heard I needed a place to stay for a little while he was the first one to offer to help. This world needs more people like Jeff in it. I was shocked and so sad to hear of his passing. May your wonderful memories of Jeff help you all through this most difficult time.

“ Jeff was always so sweet to mom and me. I am so thankful he was a part of my sister Sherry's life and there for her and the kids, that they had him for the time they did. At mom's burial, when I was having car troubles, Jeff was so kind and encouraging and had such a positive outlook on the situation that he helped me to come around and be more positive about it all. I am pretty sure the car stayed running only on Jeff's positive energy :) I will miss his caring nature and kindness and presence in the lives of my loved ones, and my heart breaks for all who knew him, for Sherry and the kids, as they walk through the process of grief and loss. May your memories of your time with Jeff help you as you walk through grief and try to find a new normal. Much love to all,
