“ Dad, I'm afraid to slow down for it would mean that I have to know you're truly gone and the tears won't stop. I'm afraid to breathe for fear my heart will break. I remember your "tortured fingers from a hand-picked rose" and I knew you had given them to me - with love. You were my Superhero, without the tights. Every important question always ended with "let's ask Dad". Our "talks", were ours alone. I will miss your laugh and the way you would giggle when you knew someone was about to screw up. I am my father's daughter, strong and independent. I keep looking at the picture of you and I and I see the love and pride. You had told us many years ago..."Don't tell me what you can do, show me." I've told all of my girls this same thing for it is words to live by. My Superhero, put down your cape and strap on your wings. You deserve this rest -I miss you Dad - forever and always, I love you - Sandy Jean Wilczynski-Jondron

“ I will miss you "ya Grumpy Old Man!" You have been one of the sure things in my life. The one person I could call and talk about the most important things in my life or even nothing at all. You showed me what it meant to be strong and many things that have shaped me into the man that I am today. When I was born almost 43 years ago you carried me into your home. I count it a privilege to have been there with you at the end of yours. Thank you for being my Dad. "I will always love you no matter what."

Thank you Linda, Fred, Shari, and Brenda for your relentless love and sacrifice to make Dad's wishes to die at home where Mom did a reality. The way you put your lives on hold so he and mom could live out theirs is amazing in a world that sometimes seems so selfish. Your selflessness is something that the world should try to exemplify. I love you, I love you, I love you all!

“ Dad, you were my monster slayer, my sunshine, moon and stars, boo-boo fixer upper, my teacher, hunting buddy, and the reason I push myself to always do my best. I will miss our talks, and time spent together. Even though you didn't like to hear me singing, you would laugh. Not hearing you say "come here baby" and getting a big bear hug tears my up. I would even willingly accept a million more whisker burns, pokes on bruises, and kicks in the butt from you if you could have stayed with us. You could always make my heart smile. We will try to be the strong ones now, but know that you took a huge piece of our hearts with you. I will always love you (yes, I am singing that out loud and you aren't here to try to muzzle me!) and I miss you so much.

“ Sitting on the back deck with dad early am and after midnight! Listening to him yell at the robins, telling them to "shut the h... Up"! And still enjoying all the other birds chatter.. Thanks for many memories and more importantly thanks for being dad and loving me as your daughter! Ok so I hear your "ya ya now go home"! Love and smooches always.??
