“ I still remember meeting my ex mother-in-law. She was busy in the kitchen making food for Memorial Day 2011.

That day she welcomed me with open arms and made me feel like family. That day I opened my heart to her and loved her as Mom. She was the type of woman who would help anyone in need, and would even give the shirt off her back if needed. The other thing I remember about that day is how she made me laugh. We laughed so many times through the years.

The last time I had the privilege of seeing her, she was already Home with hospice. Not only did she have to deal with a major stroke months prior, she also was fighting, with all she had, cancer.

As soon as I seen her, her eyes perked up. She was trying to get up from the bed.

I went to her before she could get up, I gave her the most loving hug that I had in me.

I whispered into her ear that I love you and have missed you Mom.

Her eyes started to tear up and I know she was saying that she loved and missed me too.

I thoroughly enjoyed my visit with her and Dad, And of course as usual she had me laughing. When I was getting ready to go, she didn't miss a beat at trying to get out of bed, to say goodbye.

I went to her bed gave her a loving embrace, I whispered into her ear that I loved her and then something that will stay between her and I.

She put her hand on my face I gave her a wink, and left feeling good.

She will be dearly missed and loved by her Family, and Friends. I give my sincerest condolences to the Family and everyone else. I will always love and miss you mom, I hope that your spirit gets to ride rainbows.

Although she had a major stroke, and battling cancer I thoroughly enjoyed talking with her.

Not only could I read her eyes, and felt her courageous energy. She made me laugh.... She was courageous, strong-willed, and had a very loving heart. She will be greatly missed and loved by everyone that knew her.

My deepest condolences 🙏 gout out to her Family and Friends. Love you mom... May your spirit ride rainbows
