“ This all seems crazy. It's been awhile since I've seen Lenny. He was basically one of my neighbors in a sense. Spent lots of time with him in the local sand pits and going up north with my dad with him. He was always the 3 wheeler guy. He loved them. This one time we were going up to Mio, MI to Bull Gap and that morning we were meeting at his house. I had my quad loaded down with my gear, clothes, and empty gas can and was in my way. Well I decided to take the trail to his house to avoid the road a bit and I guess I was going to fast and somehow ended up on my head. Anyways when I got to Lenny's house I was already covered in dirt and I think bleeding. The look on his face and laughing at me was how the trip all started. He was a funny guy to be around. On the trip our trailer broke and we were fortunate enough to run into some guy who took us to his house. Fixed our trailer. Had a barn full of ATVs that we rode around his property all day. We ended up staying there for dinner and even the night because it took so long to finish the trailer. Was quite a memory I won't soon forget. Until we meet again my friend. RIP Lenny
