“ I always knew Marsha as Mrs. Hill, growing up. She and my Mom spent so much time together when I was a kid, and I spent more than a few hours in her home. I never felt unwelcome there. It was like visiting close family, because that's exactly what she was.

Nobody is perfect. I'm certainly not. But if Marsha had flaws I never knew of them. Every time I spoke with her she had a certain kindness and genuine quality about her that made me feel loved and accepted. My greatest regret in knowing her will be that as we both grew older we came to live mostly separate lives. I wish I had taken the time to visit more or even simply call her while she was with us.

Just this year I made the decision to begin donating to St. Jude in honor of my grandmother, Betty Jane Winward. I'm proud to say I'll do the same in Marsha's name.

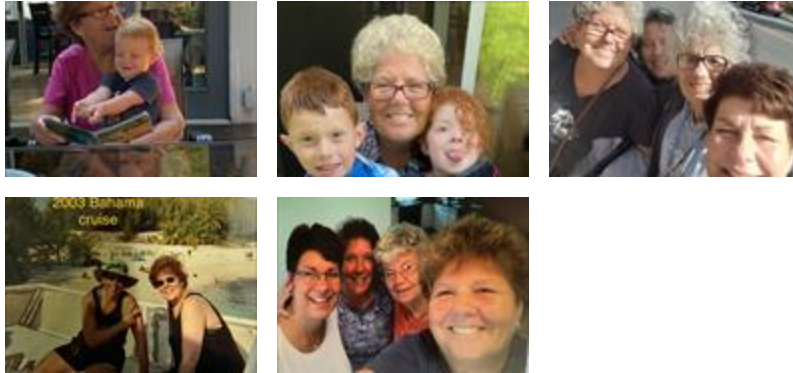

I won't forget the time I spent in your home, the kindness you showed us, or your energy and bravery in spite of your illness. Rest well. I hope to see you again someday.
