“ I am at a loss for words. Meredith was my niece and was a very sweet young lady. I loved her organic nature and gentle spirit. I think it is really important to take the stigma away from mental illness. When there are feelings of hopelessness, there is no shame in seeking help - check in with your emotional well being and take care of you. It is so important. Meredith will be missed tremendously. Her beautiful smile and gentle nature.
You are now at peace, Meredith, eternally happy. I love you

Words will never be enough to express my sadness for the loss of my beautiful niece. I will always remember the day she came home from the hospital from her birth. I had never seen a more beautiful child. I was blessed with being there to watch her grow. She is and was a light in my life that will remain bright forever! She is now in the arms of Our Holy Father. He is her protector and will watch over her with His love, peace and light. If you know of anyone suffering from depression or addiction, please reach out for help.
Love you forever my sweet baby girl,
Aunt Clare

Dear Liz, I am so very sorry about the loss of your beautiful daughter Meredith. There is nothing I can say to take away the pain and heartbreak you are experiencing, but I know that your grief is directly related to the tremendous love you've always had for her. And it will get better as time passes. I have such respect for your decision to be honest and share the hard truth of Meredith's death, and know that your willingness to do so will help others and let them know that they are not alone. I love you and your family so very much and will continue to pray for peace and healing for you and your family. Ginny (Sutherland) McMullen
