“ Neville was one-of-a-kind, a true modern-day swashbuckler who loved to share his many stories with anyone lucky enough to cross his path. As his across-the-street neighbors for several years, my family grew to appreciate the excellence with which he approached any task, especially his beautiful yard and home. When we needed it most, Neville was encouraging and caring, drawing from his own past to assure us a great life was just around the bend, despite seemingly insurmountable odds. I don't know if I've ever met anyone so devoted to developing a life of adventure and beauty as he and Muriel. Sail on in peace, Neville. You will never be forgotten.

“ I was privileged to have shared the last few months of Neville's life along with the last few months of my husband's life as Neville and my husband (Alan Bredin) were roommates at Medilodge. As it was Al passed exactly a week ago Fri. before Neville. Two old men, one riddled with pain and unable to walk the other, able to walk but with dementia. Neville enjoyed his fresh fruit daily as well as the fresh air from outside his window, ever the consummate sailor! He relished talking about his beloved wife, whom he greatly missed and his feline companion also dearly missed. I so enjoyed our talks about his career, boating, his designing his home. He never complained, almost always had a smile and encouraging word for me in spite of the pain he was in. He was always compassionate and understanding toward my husband as I'm sure he was with everyone he encountered. RIP our sweet Neville ..Judy Smarda-Bredin
