The picture in the truck was the last picture Sam took. She was so happy to get her hair cut and that everyone liked it. That was the weekend before she passed and it seemed to me like she was getting prettier every day. I was taking pictures of her when i woke up for work in her sleep. Sadly the last picture i tried taking i thought i turned the flash off but when it flashed i pulled away not to wake her. Sam was like a little bear in the morning she might wake up in a mood as she called it. Idk if that's why everyone called her Sam bear but it fit. I know the one in the diner too not because i was their but because i helped her choose her outfit. She was so excited to see her sister Katie that day. She was asking me which shirt and she went with a conservative look. I miss Sam more than i could possibly put into words. It's been 3 months and i can't go an hour without thinking about her.
