“ Wow... I had no idea. I was catching up with an old friend last night and reminded of how me, you, and Keith would walk to Toys R Us on Saturday to play Pokemon tournaments and get Trainer badges when we were in middle school. Rest in peace. ”

“ Sammy what can I say? In my heart you will always be that little boy who Robert and I would take to the park to play. Your heart was always so big and you wanted to see the best in people. I hate that distance and life put far too much space between us over the years.

I guess one of my favorite memories is when you and mom came to visit and we went to Carowinds, we had a great day over all but you took one look at the Drop Swing and you had to try it and even though I swore I would NEVER go on that thing again, all you had to do was look at me with those eyes of yours and I could not tell you no. So away we went to get strapped in so we could do it together. While waiting for our turn to go up, I told you that I hope you knew how much I loved you to put myself through it again. I hope you did know... Loved you then and love you now!

I do remember the day you were born Sammy, and the energetic toddler & up to 9 yrs old full of energy! You were so sweet & loved your family so much! You always wanted to hang out with me & your sister holly! I haven't seen you in years but always heard such great things about you & how far you've come in life.

“ I'm not to sure what to say. I guess my favorite memory. But that's just it all my memories with you were fun. I remember spending a lot of time when we were younger. Playing a bunch if video games, walking around the neighborhood, building tunnels in the snow, you crashing grandmas car in the ditch lol. Everything was fun when you were a round. Last time I seen you was like 6, 7 years ago and I wish we stayed in touch anyways love you cuz and may you RIP
