“ REMEMBERING YOU

*They say the pain will go away,
Though It will take awhile.
They say the time will come When I'll remember how to smile.
They say one day I'll seize to feel,
The hurt around my heart,
When memories, unbidden,
Cause seven tears to start.
They say these things not knowing,
I need to feel the pain,
And live within my memories,
To bring you back again.*

“ In memory of my Brother Sherman Lee Fisher
The pictures I put on here to show how much love we have for my Brother Sherman his Kids was

Kim..Lisa..Billy..Jeff

My Brother was a Father..Grandpa..he was an Ordain Minister

My Brother will be Sadly Missed

Myself living in Texas I would call him to see how he's doing I Love while i would be talking with Sherman I would get him to start laughing I can tell he would have a smile on his face

I was told when I a Baby and do Remember as much as I did when we had a Plain called the Flying Tiger had hit our House I woke up to here something Loud and seeing the Big Plain ripped the roof off then i was shaking my head i didn't know who was picking me up out of my crib I was told it was

My Brother Sherman and my Brother Jim

They grab me and got me to Safety when I grew up I told Sherman thank you for Saving my life and letting me grow up if it wasn't for my two Brothers I would not be here in this World

So my Brother I will never forget you

May You Rest In Peace

“ There's not too much to remember about Sherman, He was a quiet, tall, thin man born in Detroit; Always trying to fit in. I remember back in 1968 he and I were invited to our brother Bill's 21st. birthday party by Bill's wife Deborah in North Hollywood, CA.

We were on the back porch breaking a block of ice with ice picks and things got out of control, when all of a sudden Sherman stuck me with his pick; Then the fight started as we were rolling around we were laughing uncontrollably. The Fisher family never had it easy, but we made the the best of what we had and had fun doing it. We will always remember the good times. May he rest in peace. We love you Sherman.
