“ I can go back to my earliest memory of meeting Shirley. She was sitting on my front porch talking with my mom. Gary grabbed my brand new tricycle and was pedaling down the sidewalk and I was pissed. I didn't give him permission to ride my new bike and I ran after him. He was on the sidewalk and I cut across the lawn and grabbed his shirt and pulled him off my bike. He fell and I remember punching him. My mom and Shirley came off the porch and my mom got between us and picked up Gary. Shirley stooped over and hugged me and told me that it's ok. It's only a bike. She said he was jealous and that he and you are best friends. I realized that and she hugged me as I began to cry. Gary and I were best friends and lost contact due to my job placing me on afternoons and his enlistment. She reminded me of what was important and for the longest time we were inseparable. Thank you Shirley.
I'm sure your heavenly reunion was spectacular.
RIP, Shirley Arsenault. Love you
