“ I am so sorry for your family’s loss. Trey was taken too soon, way too young. My prayers are with you. Where to start? Under that sometimes rough and tough exterior was a kind, caring, fiercely loyal and protective, fearless friend, family member who was always ready to lend a hand when asked. He was an avid reader. I remember when he told me in the book Frankenstein by Mary Shelley, Frankenstein’s monster was an intellect. I had never read the book I had in my classroom, but he enticed me to read it, and he was right. What a contrast from the old movie I watched. Although, at times, he would mess with me and come up with an unbelievable tale, his love of reading left him with an incredible depth of knowledge. Trey didn’t fit into any certain mold; he could be complex and, at times, quiet in certain company. I don’t think many people knew how intelligent he really was. I’m sorry he was taken so soon; he had so much more to offer. I’m going to miss my sometimes silly, crazy friend and the fun we had together. Rest easy my friend. Rob

I saw this online:

I thought this was beautiful and something to ponder on...

You can shed tears because they are gone, or you can smile because they lived.

You can close your eyes and pray they will come back, or you can open your eyes and see all that they left for you. Your heart can be empty because you can't see them, or you can be full of the love you shared.

You can turn your back on tomorrow and live yesterday, or you can be happy for tomorrow because of yesterday. You can remember only that they are gone, or you can cherish their memory and let it live on.

You can cry and close your mind and feel empty, or you can do what they would want. Smile, open your heart, love... and go on.
